

“Caruso”

(Un capolavoro da Lucio Dalla)

While the faint reflections painted by the distant starlight
Shimmered on the tranquil waters of the bay at midnight
In a warm embrace the young man calmed his sighful lover
And sang to reassure her he would never love another

*My darling don't you cry
This farewell kiss is not goodbye
True love can never die
We'll meet again beneath Sorrento's sky*

Through a misty haze the brilliant rays of blazing sunrise
Put an end to restless sleep awakening with sad eyes
Dawn had raised the curtain on that day of certain parting
Drawn them to a ship bound for the new life he'd be starting
Trembling on the pier the young man soothed his tearful lover
And tried to reassure her he would never love another

*My darling don't you cry
This farewell kiss is not goodbye
True love can never die
We'll meet again beneath Sorrento's sky*

Lady Liberty stood proud in New York harbor waiting
Soon to grant each wish he'd been so long anticipating
Only in America could a young man write this story
An empty-handed seeker finding fame fortune and glory
Still the passing years would break his heart as he'd stay missing
That sweet Italian girl whose lips he never tired of kissing
Then in dying dreams the old man sought his long-lost lover
And pined to reassure her he had never loved another

*My darling don't you cry
This farewell kiss is not goodbye
True love can never die
Goes on forever like the endless sky*

*My darling don't you cry
This farewell kiss is not goodbye
True love can never die
We'll meet again beyond Sorrento's sky*
